

GLOBAL FELLOWSHIP APPLICATIONS FOR NEW YORK UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF LAW
NOW AVAILABLE FOR THE 2025-2026 ACADEMIC YEAR

New York University School of Law is currently accepting applications for the following fellowships:

Global Fellows Program

Deadline: January 15, 2025

The Global Fellows Program offers an opportunity for academics, practitioners, government officials and post-doctoral scholars from around the world to spend a semester or academic year in residence at NYU School of Law. The principal objective of the Global Fellows Program is the production of scholarship through the advancement of research. We have a notable history of hosting distinguished scholars, judges, lawyers and government officials who wish to spend time advancing their scholarship and engaging in the intellectual life of the Law School. Fellows are welcome to participate in academic activities such as fora, lectures, colloquia, seminars and conferences. They are also invited to various social events, including some organized specifically for Global Fellows and others aimed at the broader community.

Through the Global/Emile Noël Fellows Forums, Global Fellows share their research with colleagues, students and faculty and receive comment and feedback. In this way, they contribute to the intellectual life of the Law School and provide an opportunity for the community to learn about current law research from a global perspective and in a wide range of topics. The primary goal of the Global Fellows Program is the enhancement of research and it is expected that participation in the Program will result in a substantial publishable piece of scholarship.

The Global Fellows Program currently offers fellowship opportunities for scholars in the following categories:

1. Global and Senior Global Research Fellows

Global Research Fellows are tenured or tenure-track academics with a demonstrable background of strong legal scholarship. More senior academics (for example, faculty members tenured for ten years or more) may be designated as Senior Global Research Fellows at the discretion of the selection committee.

2. Global and Senior Global Fellows from Practice & Government

Global Fellows from Practice & Government are government officials, judges, officials from international organizations and lawyers in private practice who wish to take a semester or academic year away from their posts to engage in serious scholarship. More experienced officials and practitioners may be designated as Senior Global Fellows from Practice & Government at the discretion of the selection committee.

3. Post-Doctoral Global Fellows

Post-Doctoral Global Fellows are post-doctoral scholars who have attained their doctoral degrees within the past four years and who have not yet secured a tenure-track academic appointment at an institution. Post-Doctoral Global Fellows meeting these eligibility requirements may be considered for a limited number of merit-based post-doctoral stipends of US$70,000 for the academic year (or US$35,000 per academic semester), subject to applicable tax(es).

Emile Noël Fellowship Program

Deadline: January 15, 2025

The principal objective of the Emile Noël Fellowship program is scholarship and the advancement of research on the themes prioritized by the Jean Monnet Center for International and Regional Economic Law & Justice, which include the following overarching areas: European Integration, general issues of International (principally WTO), and Regional Economic Law and Justice and Comparative Constitutional Law. The expectation is that the residency of our Fellows at NYU School of Law will result in at least one paper that will be of sufficient quality to be published as a Jean Monnet Working Paper. During the period of residence, we encourage our Fellows to participate fully in the life of the Law School and of NYU in general, not to mention the endless possibilities that New York City has to offer. The Fellows will be expected to play an active role in the activities of the Center, particularly the Global/Emile Noël Fellows Forum, which is the vehicle through which work is presented and discussed, and encapsulates the idea of the Program – the University as a community of scholars. The Forum takes place on a regular basis throughout the fall and spring semesters.

The Jean Monnet Center at NYU School of Law currently offers fellowship opportunities for scholars in the following categories:

1. Global & Senior Global Emile Noël Research Fellows

Global Emile Noël Research Fellows are post-doctoral or tenured academics with a demonstrable background of legal scholarship. More senior academics (for example, faculty members tenured for ten Years or more) at the discretion of the selection committee may be designated as Senior Global Emile Noël Research Fellows.

2. Global Emile Noël Fellows from Practice and Government

Global Emile Noël Fellowships are also open to government officials, judges, officials from international organizations and lawyers in private practice who wish to take a semester or academic year away from their posts to engage in serious scholarship.

3. Post-Doctoral Global Emile Noël Fellows

Post-Doctoral Global Emile Noël Fellows are post-doctoral scholars who have attained their doctoral degrees within the past four years and who have not yet secured a tenure-track academic appointment at an institution. Post-Doctoral Global Emile Noël Fellows meeting these eligibility requirements may be considered for a limited number of merit-based post-doctoral stipends of US$70,000 for the academic year (or US$35,000 per academic semester), subject to applicable tax(es).

Visiting Doctoral Researcher Program

Deadline: February 15, 2025

Visiting Doctoral Researchers are doctoral candidates enrolled in a doctoral degree program at another institution abroad who wish to benefit from spending one year of their research at NYU School of Law. They will be fully integrated into the JSD program as far as is relevant. The JSD program invites approximately five to six Visiting Doctoral Researchers each academic year to contribute to the Visiting Doctoral Researcher position.

The Visiting Doctoral Researchers are actively integrated into the Law School community through various academic and social programs, including an invitation to participate in the JSD Colloquium where they may present their research.

Hauser/Remarque Global Fellowship (Joint Fellowship with NYU Remarque Institute)

Deadline: January 15, 2025

Together with the Remarque Institute at NYU, the Hauser Global Law School Program at NYU School of Law is piloting a new fellowship for scholars working on law and law-adjacent subjects in subfields including international law, European law, international legal history, and sociology of law in Europe. These broad fields may cover a diverse array of subjects, from the laws of war to imperial power.

These fellowships are yearlong and amount to US$70,000, subject to applicable tax(es), for the September 1 - May 31 period.

Fellows will become part of both the Hauser Fellows cohort and the Remarque Institute cohort for the year of their stay and will be expected to participate in and contribute meaningfully to the intellectual life of the two programs. Fellows will benefit from both environments and have a full year to pursue their own research and writing. By bringing together the academics, practitioners, government officials, and postdoctoral scholars undertaking the Hauser program with the expertise on Europe and its near neighbors in the Remarque program, we hope to enable intellectual collaboration, meaningful crossover between the Law School and the humanities and social sciences, and inventive, effective research that speaks to both areas of research and learning.

The fellowship is open to foreign nationals and to US and dual-nationality citizens who are teaching, working or studying outside of the US, in alignment with the eligibility requirements for the Hauser Global Fellows Program. Given the Remarque Institute's focus on Europe (broadly conceived), successful applications will need to involve Europe to some degree.

The Institute and the Hauser Program will collaborate on providing office space. Two fellows will be selected for the 2025-2026 academic year. Please note that housing will not be provided, and fellowships may not be renewed.
